A NEW ORLEANS SENSATION.—[From the N. O. Picayune.]—Few of the residents in the lower part of the city of late years but are familiar with some of the incidents we are now relating. They have often seen in the twilight of summer evenings a singular apparition.—Suddenly, on the balcony of Music street has appeared an old man, with long gray hair, and clad in the costume of half a century ago. The garments were faded and worn, but revealed a richness which in earlier days was more fitted for a court than an American metropolis. He was a very tall man, although a hunchback, and but for the deformity would have been of gigantic proportions. In the breadth of shoulders, the deep powerful chest, and long nervous arms resided marvellous strength, while the lower limbs, fashioned in magnificent strength and beauty, arrested attention and commanded admiration wherever he appeared. He spoke to no one, looked at no one, but in silent abstraction pursued his lonely walk far into the night. Years went by, and night after night little children paused in their play to watch the receding figure of the lonely man.

It must have been forty years ago that he first came among us. He looked middle aged then; but as the years flew by the sturdy frame remained flexible and active, but the hair grew gray and his face was seamed with wrinkles.

He lived in a little brick building that set back from the street. Wild vines crept over the crumbling tiles and wreathed fantastic shapes on the chimney tops. In the yard beautiful flowers bloomed all the year round, and their rich perfume made the air sensuous and sweet. At a window shaded by a trellis work, laid in the bloom of roses, the old man sat of afternoons and watched the sun's decline. No one else was ever seen in the house—no one ever crossed the threshold; and so he lived, a smileless, sad old man, in a lonely house.

One day, not a great while since, the neighbors saw that the blinds in the house were closed. The old man had not appeared on the street for weeks, and the grass had begun to grow from the cracks of the marble slabs at his door, and it began to be whispered about that the old man was dead.

At last, one day, the neighbors went in (they were poor people, but kindly and true). Sure enough he was dead. He lay pallid and stark on a pallet of straw. There were a few scattered chairs around the room and a plain table. One only object arrested the eye: Near the body was a rich casket, set in mother of pearl and gold. Jewels flashed from the costly lid, and wreathed in the dust of diamonds were engraved the "Lilies of France" in a coronet of gold. They opened the box and there flashed on their eyes the Bourbon diadem. It was stolen the night of the 16th of August 1830, when Charles the Tenth abdicated the throne of France in favor of the Duke of Bordeaux. Underneath it was a manuscript, written in French. It contained only these words:

"I am Charette the Vendean General. Maria of Savoy was to have been my wife. She was taken from me and given to the Comte d'Artois. I could have forgiven this, but he deserted me when most I needed his help and assistance. I revenged myself and procured his overthrow, and am happy since he died in exile."

This was all. Over his life silence now draws a veil. His wayward passions, his inward conflicts, none can estimate. Lonely and sad he perished in exile; none could appreciate his injuries; let none judge too harshly of his life.

WRITING FOR THE PAPERS.—One of the most laborious of editorial duties is the examination of volunteered manuscripts. There are many who, at some period of their lives, are afflicted with as irrepressible a mania for seeing themselves in print as a young maiden is supposed to have for beholding herself in a looking glass. This is not the only grievance which afflicts the souls of the conductors of newspapers. The New York Tribune remarks that "the young persons who believe they have a mission to write verses, the women who want to support themselves by selling 'compositions' to the newspapers, and the scores of people with bees in their bonnets who compose ponderous essays on incomprehensible subjects, are serious afflictions."—Baltimore Sun.

There is another thing relative to the manuscripts which are accepted; and that is the miserable chirography in which many of them are written. Do authors know how much they annoy printers by sending unintelligible manuscripts to the press. If they did they would try and do better than they do and not be the cause of many an oath and hearty wish that the authors were in the bottomless pit, or some other place of moderate torment.

REMARKABLE ROSE BUSHES.—The oldest of all rose bushes is said to be one which is trained upon one side of the cathedral of the Hildesheim, in Germany. The root is buried under the crypt, below the choir. The stem is a foot thick, and a half a dozen branches nearly cover the eastern side of the church, bearing countless flowers in summer. Its age is unknown, but documents exist which prove that Bishop Hildio, nearly a thousand years ago, protected it by a stone roof, which is still extant. The largest rose bush is a white Banksia—so called after Lady Banks, in the Marine Garden at London, which was sent there, the first of its kind, in 1812 by Bonpland. Its numerous branches, some of which measure eighteen inches in circumference, cover an immense wall to a width of nearly fifty feet, and at times, in early spring, as many as fifty thousand flowers have been counted on this queen of all roses.

THE PASSION PLAY.—From the correspondence of the London papers we have full accounts of the success of the Passion Play in Ambergau, in Bavaria, which commenced early in June, and will be played throughout the summer. The performance, which is repeated every ten years, was it will be recollected to have taken place last year, when it was interrupted by the breaking out of the war. All the preparations having been made at considerable expense royal permission has been obtained to carry out the programme during the present summer. The height of the season was expected to commence about the middle of the present month, when the schools close, and to continue for three or four weeks, during which time the little village will be crowded. The play lasts from 5 a. m. to 5 p. m.

DRUGS AND CHEMICALS.

SIMMONS' LIVER
The symptoms of Liver Complaint are uneasiness and pain in the side. Sometimes the pain is in the shoulder, and is mistaken for rheumatism. The stomach is affected with loss of appetite and sickness, bowels in general constive, sometimes alternating with lax. A sensation of considerable loss of memory, accompanied with painful sensation of having left undone something which ought to have been done. Often complaining of weakness, dizziness and low spirits. Sometimes many of the above symptoms attend the disease, and at other times very few of them; but the liver is generally the most involved. Cure the Liver with

MEDICAL.

MATIN AGUE MIXTURE WILL POSITIVELY CURE CHILLS AND FEVER. It does not matter if the case be chronic, "MATIN AGUE MIXTURE" will eradicate it entirely from the system. We could refer to thousands who have been entirely relieved by Matin Ague Mixture, but we shall only give the names and residences of those who are known in this community, and whom any party, so desiring, may consult.

[TRANSLATION.] Nantes, France, December 28th, 1870.

Mr. R. H. Bigger, Baltimore, Maryland:

Dear Sir: I have the honor of acknowledging the receipt of your letter of the 10th ultimo, containing order for fifteen bottles of Matin Ague Mixture, Thillander & Co., in compliance with our contract of 15th October last, and it is with pleasure I constitute you Sole Agent of the United States, Central and South America, for the sale of the Matin Ague Mixture, which has already accomplished so much good in our own country and Spain.

This Mixture contains no quinine, and nothing whatever that can injure the general health; nor is it disagreeable to the taste. I purchased the prescription of the celebrated Spanish Physician, Dr. Pedro Gonzalez, after his retirement from his profession, who gave me the most conclusive proofs and assurances that he had used the prescription in his practice of forty (40) years without its having failed in a single instance.

Matin Ague Mixture is chiefly composed of the very best and oldest wine, and the patient need not change his customary mode of living whilst taking the remedy. Indeed it is a pleasant tonic, and if taken in small quantities before breakfast, each day it will prevent chills and fever in localities where miasma prevails. The patient will find that the Matin Ague Mixture excites an appetite, and that instead of injuring it improves the general health. I warrant the Matin Ague Mixture to effect cure in all cases.

Yours, very truly, GUSTAVE DURANTE.

We are constantly receiving such letters as the following: Baltimore, May 25th, 1871.

Mr. R. H. Bigger: My youngest child was taken with the Chills and Fever when only nine days old; he was tended by a prominent physician for it, and he finally said he could do nothing for him, as his blood was turning to water. A friend advised me to try your Mixture. I called and saw you, and Mr. George Myer stated it had never been given to a child that young, and advised me to get the mother to take the medicine and adulterate it with water and try it. I did so, and in four days the child was cured, and the cure was remarkable, and can be substantiated by several of the neighbors. Yours, respectfully, H. RICHMOND, 27 E. Pratt st., Balt.

[Dr. William Frederick Stewart's Certificate.] Baltimore, May 1, 1871.

Having analyzed the Matin Ague Mixture, I do not hesitate to recommend it as an excellent remedy for Chills and Fever. It contains nothing that will injure the general health.

WM. F. STEWART, M. D., Resident Physician Maryland Hospital.

[Dr. J. B. Williams' Certificate.] Baltimore, April 19th, 1871.

I hereby certify that I have made a careful analysis of the Matin Ague Mixture, and that it does not contain a particle of quinine. I believe it to be a most efficient remedy for Chills and Fevers.
